methodology is that "the longer your range, the bolder you can be," says Crowe. "Our City Centre Area Plan was developed along these guidelines, and it allows stakeholders to become accustomed to the expansion that will inevitably occur in the future. It fosters trust between planners and stakeholders, and purely on a practical level, it gives stakeholders the freedom to carry on with their leases and, ultimately, relocate if required."

Accordingly, there is no set phased schedule for the creation of urban villages that will anchor each Richmond station on the new Canada Line, other than that the land has been earmarked for these villages and organic growth is already taking place. The completion of the Canada Line also facilitates an initiative to redevelop the north end of No. 3 Road as a higher-end commercial/entertainment zone.

"The concept has been approved and we're working on the
